After Brescia Bombing

Italian Leftists Storm Offices Of Neo-Fascists in Many Cities

ROME, May 29 (AP).-Leftist extremists armed with bombs. bricks and iron bars stormed rightist targets across Italy today in retaliation for the terrorist bombing in Brescia yesterday which killed six persons. Millions of Italians took part in strikes and peaceful rallies in display of mourning for the Brescia victims. But as the day wore on, the protests turned ugly. The chief targets of the attacks, reported by police in at least 40 cities, were the offices and workers of Italy's neo-Fascist party, the Italian Social Move-ment (MSI), But offices of the Christian Democrats, which with the MSI fought against divorce in the recent national referendum. also came under assault. At least 22 persons were arrested. About 100 persons, most of them policemen, were injured in clashes.

Doctor Is Arrested Police continued to hunt those responsible for the Brescia hombing, which occurred during an anti-Pascist raily in the northern industrial city.

Walter Moretti, a 29-year-old physician, was arrested by police when he returned home after treating the injured at Brescia's main hospital. Police charged him with possessing explosives and being an accomplice in an attempt to resurrect the Fascist party, outlawed under Italy's postwar constitution.

He was not linked with yesterday's bombing but was the 23d person arrested in the Brescia area since police uncovered a dynamite-smuggling ring there two months ago.

The unofficial day of mourning began with a four-bour general strike called by Italy's major labor unions, Industry, commerce and public transportstion came to a halt as millions of workers turned out for rallies in Rome, Milan, Turin and other cities.

Israeli sources gave this picture of what the agreement would contain:

• Israel will withdraw from 325-square-mile salient captured in the 1973 war and from a sliver of the eastern Golan Heights taken in 1967, including the former administrative capital at Kuneitra. Israel will keep three strategic hills west of the city.

• The buffer zone will be 1.2 to 3.6 miles wide, manned by about 1,250 troops of a UN Disengagement Observer Force

• Syrian civilians will return to Kuneitra and the villages in the buffer zone under Syrian civilian administration.

Rival's Ship Maneuver Brings Athens Alert

Greek-Turk Showdown Looms on Aegean Oil pute over oil exploration rights

ATHENS, May 29 (AP).-The Greek armed forces were placed in an advanced state of readiness today, reliable sources said, as a Turkish ship neared the eastern Aegean to begin exploring for oil in waters claimed by Greece.

The Greek cabinet, headed by Premier Adamantios Androutsopoulos, went into emergency session, presumably to discuss the latest developments surrounding Greece reacted after an escorting flotilla of Turkish warships and four submarines reportedly sailed at dawn for the Aegean from the Golcuk naval base in the Marmora Sea.

The exploratory ship, said to belong to the Oceanographic Department of the Turkish Navy, was reported to be accompanied by submarines and minesweepers. The naval movements heightened fears of an encounter at sen between the two NATO allies. In Ankara, Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes said the movement of the research ship, preceded by war vessels, was not simed at infringing on "the territorial unity of Greece."

"Therefore, I see no reason to interpret the reported Greek military moves from the Turkish viewpoint," he said. Mr. Gunes said he hoped "there will not be any interference by Greece against Turkey's natural rights." Extra air force units, including F-5 fighters, had been moved to northern Greece to be closer to the eastern Aegean. Turkey claims it has the right explore for oil in the seabed of the eastern Aegean. But

Greece says the scabeds are part of the continental shelves of nearby Greek islands. Since the Greek-Turkish disin the Aegean erupted earlier this year, both countries have been reinforcing their military border units. Greek sources said Athens has also bolstered its defenses on Greek islands, which string along

Turkey's western coast. Last Saturday, Turkey announced having received a Greek reply to an earlier note stating the desire to negotiate their differences based on the 1958 Geneva Convention. The convention de-

Ulster Strike Is Ended; Assembly Is Suspended

BELFAST, May 29 (NYT) .-standstill.

The Ulster Workers' Council, the Protestant group that ordered the industrial shutdown 15 days ago, announced a "phased return to work" less than 24 hours after it had achieved one of its primary goals-the collapse of the Executive that for five months had governed the province on the basis of power-sharing between Catholics and Protestants.

The council decided to end the strike without achieving its other main objective-a promise by the British government that new elections would be held following a period of direct rule from London. Prime Minister Harold Wilson held an emergency cabinet meeting today to discuss the situation.

The decision of the workers' council appeared to be leading quickly to a resumption of electricity supplies, communications, transportation, sewage disposal and other essential services that had been cut off by the strike.

lower - middle classes that make up the bulk of Chile's population. "Economic policy is favoring the big guys, not the little people," Rafael Cumsille, president of the 140,000-member Confederation of Retailers and Small Businessmen, sald in an interview. His confederation is one of the three lowermiddle class professional associations whose national strikes in 1972 and 1973 brought the Allende government to its knees. . It appears that the confederation members, who rose up against Mr. Allende when his policies threatened their economic survival, are beginning to feel the same way about the military

"If this economic situation goes on much past the end of the year, we'll have to start fighting again," declared Eduardo Garin, another officer of the confederation. Does that mean you would strike again? He was asked.
"Yes," Mr. Garin said.

The assertion is hard to evaluate because strikes are illegal in Chile, the military's monopoly of power is absolute and the junta has warned that it will not tolerate pressures on the government and that economic sacrifices be needed until 1978. Spreading Discontent

However, the discontent is there and it is spreading as the cold, wet Southern Hemisphere winter closes in. The families who live in the two-room wooden shanties of the industrial slums around the cities are cutting cheese, eggs, powdered milk and, often, meat out of their diets. They eat bread and beans and drink tea with no sugar. They say that they have no money to buy clothes or shoes. There is a grass-roots summation of Chile's recent economic history in one assessment going around the shantytown:

"Under the old government, there was plenty of money but nothing to buy. Now the stores are full, but there is no money." The government's statistics show a 60 percent rise in the cost of living in the first three months of the year. A 56 percent salary increase was authorized this month and, according to the government's Office of Development and Planning, this will entail printing more money, which will fuel inflation further.

The planning office's firstquarter report says that copper production the foundation of Chile's economy, is up by 36 percent over last year. Industrial output is up by 5 percent, the report says, but so is unemploy-

Prodded in part by political persecution but also by the squeeze put on the economy, certain categories of Chilean workers and technicians are leaving the country.

At the same time Chilean engineers are beginning to return the Chuquicamata copper mine, Chile's largest, which they left after the Allende government came to power. The categories of people who are leaving and the categories who are coming back to Chile indicate that, although the junta has not yet established any clear social Kidnapping has in the last three years become the most an economy torn apart by politilucrative crime in Argentina. Publicity has focused mainly on such spectacular abductions as the one that brought the People's Revolutionary Army, a Marxist guerrilla group, a record $14-million ran-som for Victor Samuelson, the general manager of the Exxon Corp.'s Argentine subsidiary.

But relatively few of the kidnappings involve high-priced foreign executives; of more than 500 persons kidnapped last year for ransoms totaling more than $50 million, only 29 were foreigners. This year the rate of kidnap-pings has remained high and once kidnapping as the easiest source of funds "They tried bank robbery but found it too difficult and dangerous and not nearly as profitable," said Mr. Lockwood, who has lived in Argentina since 1938.

The police also report that guerrillas and common criminals have virtually abandoned bank robbery in favor of kidnapping. The trend began in 1968, when the teen-age grandson of a magazine editor became the first Argentine kidnapping victim in 35 years. Protecting the Presidency

President Nixon has been telling us that he has been withholding evidence, defying subpoenas and inviting confrontations in the courts for the sake of protecting the presidency. He has been acting, he regularly tells us, not for his own sake but for the preservation of the executive privileges, stability and authority of the office he will turn over to future presidents. These are admirable objectives—or would be if they were not being debased by the purposes to which Mr. Nixon has put them. For one must ask a few questions. Authority to do what? To manipulate and misuse the police and regulatory powers of government? Stability in what sense and at what price? Is stability synonymous with merely continuing in office, no matter what crimes or improprieties or abuses of office may be committed in the president's name and with his authority? Privileges such as confidentiality to protect what? To protect executive office conversations where criminal activity is seriously con-

The point is this: The presidency that Mr. Nixon has by his own acts created will in fact establish standards for the conduct of the office by future presidents. And this is something the House Judiciary Committee needs to keep firmly in mind as it proceeds with the impeachment proceedings. For in a particular sense Richard Nixon is right. It is much less the fate of Mr. Nixon that is at stake than the character of the American presidency. Thus a vote against impeachment—a vote in effect to do nothingwill say something of enduring significance about what is tolerable and acceptable behavior on the part of future presidents. And it will not be enough to rest such a vote on some narrow legalistic point, as one might in a different kind of proceeding. On the contrary, given the body of public knowledge now generally available, and given the implications of that knowledge, it will surely be required of any self-respecting congressman that he explain how he squares the conduct of the Nixon presidency with the minimum expectations of the public concerning the office.

We raise this matter, which you would think was self-evident, only because it does

For months now-or has it been years?- not appear to be all that obvious to some members of Congress. Understandably, but regrettably, there seems to be a mad search on for some way to avoid the burden of judgment, a futile hope that some particular piece of paper or shred of evidence or fragment of a transcript will materialize to reseive the issue for the legislators. This forform wish is analogous to a feeling existing outside the Congress that the next "horror." whatever it may be, will dissolve all further grounds for doubt and bring the tawdry affair to an end. In both cases, what we have is a flight from judgment, an abdication of responsibility.

Now what does this mean for the Judiciary Committee in practical terms? It means, first of all, that the committee members should take charge of the impeachment process and refuse to let the President define their duties and their rights. While continuing to seek the evidentiary material they have requested, they should also acknowledge the implications of the President's refusal to surrender it voluntarily. And on the basis of this, they should further acknowledge that the material they have in hand relating to specific incidents, while perhaps not adequate for a criminal trial, is not being used in a criminal trial. Their obligation is not to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the President has committed crimes; rather it is to decide whether the information at their disposal does or does not constitute reasonable grounds for returning a bill of impeachment on which the full House will have : n opportunity to vote. Even this would be no more than the equivalent of an indictment -the formal presentation of charges which the Senate would then be obliged to resolve.

If the Judiciary Committee lets itself get bogged down in disputes over the meaning of one piece of evidence, as if it were a trial jury, or if various of its members seek to buy time by endlessly pursuing an air-tight, politically risk-free case, they will be abdicating responsibility. What is wanted is an act of will and judgment. It cannot be avoided because a failure to act would in itself be a judgment by default. And it would be a judgment not just upon the Nixon presidency but upon the standards this nation sets for future presidents.

International Opinion

As the numerous political groupings in Portugal, currently numbering more than 80. gradually crystalize into parties, the common factor emerging is the impossibility of any group assuming any label that could be interpreted as "conservative." Public opinion in the present atmosphere demands word-forms indicating "social," "socializing" or "socialist" tendencies. The public currently associates conservatism with "exploitation" and "immobilism" and anyone entering the lists with that sort of attribute would be doomed to failure at the start. The state television organization and the newspapers, themselves wallowing in the intoxication of liberation and in many cases indulging in left-wing opportunism into the bargain, are playing an important part in maintaining this climate of opinion in being. -From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

More than ever now with inflation becoming intolerable and with the effects of the oil price rises yet to come, the French government will have to look after French interests. ## India's Nuclear Test: Political Fallout?

By Chalmers M. Roberts

WASHINGTON.—On March 21, rather meaningless pledge of UN 1963, President Kennedy remarked that "I am haunted by the feeling that by 1970, unless we are successful, there may be 10 nuclear powers instead of four and by 1975, 15 or 20." At the time JFK was trying to nail down with the Soviet Union an agreement to ban nuclear tests; he had hopes that all tests, including those conducted underground, would be barred. The most he could get, however, was a ban on tests above ground and in space. Ever since, underground testing has continued; even today there is hope for no more than a limit on the size of nuclear weapons that may be tested underground, not a limitation on all testing,

Along with a test ban, at the time, there were on and off negotiations for a companion treaty, one to halt nuclear proliferation: that is, to get nonnuclear powers voluntarily to give up their nuclear options. On March 5, 1970, the non-proliferation treaty (NPT) finally went into effect. But, as the recent initial test by India shows, 15 has not halted proliferation.

Currently the NPT has 105 national signatures; of these nations, only 82 have finally ratified the treaty and forsworn making nuclear explosives. There is, of course, no essential difference between an explosion for weapons purposes and one for what India calls "peaceful uses of atomic energy.

France and China would have nothing to do with either the test ban or NPT; both are now with the original trio, the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain. Since India's test explosion was underground, it did not violate the test ban treaty to which India subscribed.

U.S. Ratification

NPT was essentially a creation of the Johnson administration though brought into effect in the early Nixon years. The Nixon administration, and Henry Kissinger in particular, never thought much of this approach, but since it had some so far b." the time Mr. Nixon took office, the agreement was sent to the Senate and ratified.

Of the nations with the in-dustrial potential to make nuclear weapons, only Canada and Sweden, in the West, and East Germany and its Warsaw Pact allies, in the East, have both signed and ratified. Among those who have signed but not yet ratified are West Germany, Japan, Egypt, and Switzerland, Those who have not even signed include Israel, Pakistan, South Africa, Brazil and Argentina. However. West Germany and Japan, after long hassles over inspection provisions, are now expected to ratify, unless some last minute hitch, such as the Indian example, intervenes. Taiwan has both signed and ratified,

The net result, then, is that NPT has turned out to be pretty much of a bust. President Kennedy's fear of 15 or 20 nuclear powers by 1975 is not going to come true, but the potential remains. The knowledge and technology are both evident in a good many nations; only the decision to act, as in the Indian case, has yet to be taken. Pakistan now is hinting it will do so.

Too Mechanistic

The truth of the matter, it seems to me-looking back over the history of arms control measures—is that such measures tend to be looked upon too mechanistically. That is, too often servocates believe that such an agreement will help dampen national rivairies and, thereby, make the world a bit safer for all. The reality is that arms control measures-those with substantial meaning-are the product of the international political environment. This is not to denigrate the work of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, which has struggled so long and so hard for various agreements, or of United Nations and other groups as well. Their work is essential but it provides, in the end, only the tools for political decision making. In the case of India, the New Delhi government once sought a ioint Soviet-American nuclear guarantee against Chine. The best it could get, however, was a action in case it, or any other nation, was "a victim of an act or an object of a threat of aggression in which nuclear weapons are used." Quite obviously that was not enough, and understandably so. In the case of India, a terribly poor nation, the perceived defense necessity of having nuclear weapons overrode the expense involved. India is not likely to have any meaningful nuclear power for a considerable time; but by spending millions of dollars more, it will at least have enough to have some deterrent effect on its neighbors.

Israel's refusal to have anything to do with the NPT is clearly a device of deterrence against its Arab neighbors. As a recent study at the Adlai Stevenson Institute muts it, were Israel to give up the nuclear option "its psycho-the Arabs would be undercut, and its proven usefulness as a bargaining counter in procuring conventional arms' from the United States "would be greatly diminished."

Rissinger is operating on the assumption that the way to keep nuclear weapons from springing up in the Mideast is to bring about a political peace. And he is right, just as he is right in believing that the way to keep the Arab oil taps open is to create an Arab-Israeli settlement or at least a modus vivendi in the meantime.

China, Prance, India and others have long contended that NPT was a Soviet-American device to limit the nuclear club in their own interests. In this they are right, but not totally right. Any limitation on nuclear weapons is logical-deterrence value vis-à-vis to everybody's benefit. The Nixon-Kissinger approach has been to concentrate on the central threat a Soviet-American nuclear clash by means of the strategic arms (SALT) agreements. This, too, I believe is right. But arms control alone, however important, is only part of the problem; the central issue is the whole range of political agreements for as Kissinger would have it, of political power balance; among the five centers of current power, the United States, the U.S.S.R., China, Japan and Western Europe.

The Indian nuclear explosion. then, may reasonably be deplored because it complicates the problem. But it is not disastrous in itself. And it should be no excuse for exacerbating American-Indian relations; rather it should spur efforts to improve those relations in non-nuclear fields.

CHARLOTTESVILLE. Va. -When President Nixon dismissed Archibald Cox as his special presecutor in the Watergate case, he not only misjudged the public outcry that followed, but liberated Cox to speak out on the rules of law and impeachment. This may very well prove to be one of Nixon's fatal mistakes.

For there is confusion in the country and even in the Congress now about what the rules of law is using his freedom to write and speak to clarify the issues to the press, television and Congress. Many other men in his situation might have destroyed their influence by roaring around the country like a loose cannon, firing at the man who fired him, but not Cox. He appeared here to address the law graduates at the University of Virginia the other day and talked with the sweep of the centuries and the kindliness of a neighborly judge. No rancor. No vindictiveness. No pessimism about the law or the republic. But on fidelity to the Constitution and the process of applying it to the President, as to any other citizen, he was unvielding.

to the Judiciary Committee of the House in its impeachment proceedings. Cox argued, would be even worse. "The President's lawyers say that he may not be indicted," Cox observed, "and that his guilt or innocence of wrongdoing must be decided by the processes of impeachment. If impeachment is to be a viable method of inquiring into alleged executive misconduct, the House of Representatives-the grand in-

His Conclusion

Here Cox reached his conclu-"In my view," he said, "the refusal to comply with the Judiciary Committee's subpoenss denies presidential accountability . . . failure of the committee to Greece's most pressing problems are economic. In the 12 months ended in February, it had the highest rate of inflation among the 24 members of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development - 33.4 percent. The government has taken strong measures to hold down government spending and restrict credit and inflation seems to be slow-

But certain industries, such as construction, have also slowed down, and confidence in the economy seems to be dropping. "People are worried about their money, their jobs, everything," a government official said. "They have the feeling they're not on safe ground; they don't know what is happening."

In one area, the government s policy is quite clear. It will not tolerate dissent. Last week, for instance, a newspaper in Patras was seized for publishing a picture of former Premier Constantine Caramanlis, and a German writer was given a 14-month sentence for giving tourists leaflets criticizing the govern-paid supporters, called sokaiya, to thwart shareholder criticism.

Groups of sokaiya huddle around the podium, protecting management from verbal abuse. They shout such things as "igi nasui" ("no objection") and "sansei" ("approval"), and they drown out criticism while ramming through management's

U.S. Flexible About Gold, Volcker Says

Compromise With EEC Hint by Treasury Aide

By Ronald Soble

LOS ANGELES, May 29.-Paul Volcker, Treasury under secretary for monetary affairs, maintains that Washington has not rejected out-of-hand a Common Market proposal allowing central banks to buy and sell gold among themselves at a much higher price than the official $42.22-an-ounce

"It's something we would consider," said the 46-year-old outgoing undersecretary in an interview with the Times. "We are not opposed to talking about the subject."

Mr. Volcker's comment suggested that Washington may be moving toward a more conciliatory policy on the sensitive issue of what role-if any-gold should play within the context of international monetary reform.

So far, the Nixon administration has steadfastly clung to a position that gold should have no role in monetary reform.

The Common Market recently proposed that—given the major disparity between the official price of gold and the four times higher private market level central banks should at least be free to deal among themselves at a private market-related price. Mr. Volcker made clear, however, that he views such a possible compromise position only in the perspective of long-range monetary reform. He suggested that Washington would oppose the Common Market's proposal if it ultimately led to a world monetary system which "is too much centered on gold" rather than on an official international currency such as the United States "attaches a high political importance" and "wholeheartedly supports." Mr. Stein, as Mr. Nixon predicted yesterday, said that U.S. inflation could drop to around 7 percent instead of the 102 percent of the past year. He pointed out that food supplies on hand and predicted were mereasing, and that in contrast to a rise in wholesale prices of 14 percent in the six months to last October, they rose "less than half of 1 percent in the six months to April.

On energy, the dominant factor is the oil price and "no one believes that the world prices of crude oil will triple or quadruple in the next year as they did in the past year. Mr. Stein said. Mr. Stein criticized Mr. Van Lanney for only mentioning "in pessing" traditional economic restraints which "in fact have not been used very long anywhere The worldwide skepticism about the future of inflation is largely the result of skepticism about the willingness of governments to carry out these traditional policies," he said. Lone Voice Mr. Stein also differed with the rest of today's speakers who expressed concern over the situation in developing countries. He said he did not think there should be concern that commodity prices fall "too far." They had "skyrocketed." he said, and a fall would be "natural and helpful." "Concern with the problems of the less-developed primary-producing countries should not be reflected in policies to hold up prices while the world is under the threat of inflation." Mr. Stein said. European Common Market sookesman Sir Christopher Soames earlier warned that only continued liberalization of world trade could stave off a slide into a 1930s-style depression, and that raging inflation could lead to "a breakdown of our societies as they are today."

And that's where Bache could make a real difference. We're looking for Registered Representatives who realize that it takes more today to satisfy a client than it. ever did before. A lot more.

More financial services. More assurance of financial stability. More research and guidance. All of which you arould be able to offer—if you were with Bache.

For example, we'd enable you to offer your clients a full range of commodity services. We're members of all leading Commodity Exchanges around the world, including the Paris Bourse de Commerce. Your clients could arbitrage in sugar and cocoa in London. Paris and New York. You'd be able to offer recommendations -- both technical and fundamental—from one of the largest commodity. research staffs in the business.

Or take options. At Bache, you could help your clients trade in CBOE options, other stock options or London commodity options. Or they could utilize CBOE options in combination with other investments, to aim at both growth and income.

Or consider new issues and what they could mean to you. Our affiliate, Halsey, Stuart & Co. - one of the leading investment bankers in the U.S.-is continually buying investment grade offerings of leading corporations. Offerings that could make a difference in your client relationships.

In short, as one of the very largest U.S. investment firms, with one of the largest capital bases, we know it takes more to succeed. So we offer more. Top quality institutional research. Computericed operational and processing capabilities, that serve both our own needs and those of other firms. A competitive approach to commission rates and compensation policies. And more and more offices in Europe to work in ... with more coming.

If you agree that you could can more it you could offer more-talk to Bache. Call our Manager un confidence. of course) at the office of your choice - or mail him; our resume-lodav.

The Hinge of Europe 1081-1797 By William H. McNelll. University of Chicago. 334 pp. $10

IF the Adriatic really does engulf Venice, as the Arno in half-enguifed Florence. what would one rush to save? The St. Mark's mosaic of the "Agony in the Garden"? On the principle of women and children first. Veronese's pearly cherub-attended nudes? Or. plumping for acreage. Tintoretto's huge "Paradise"? My choice would be Giorgione's enigmatic "Storm." but William McNeil1 would, it seems, head for bundles of yel-lowed, neatly written carefully balanced trading company ledgers which tell how the cash was earned to pay for churches, palaces and frescoes.

Other historians of the Serene Republic have shown us the thinker's brain and painter's hand: McNeill goes first for stomach and biceps. He shows Venice climbing to the top of the big league by building merchant ships equipped with com-pass and stern-post rudder, able to voyage not just in summer but all year whereon Venetians brought from the Near East "spices"—a term that includes sugar, incense and aphrodisiacs; also the strong sweet wine of Crete (the Chates: Lafite of its day), which they sold north of the Alps, buying German metals to be retailed along the Po and southward. What canon law was to Rome and scarlet cloth to Florence, curry was to Venice.

The lagoon cit, remained a great seapower from 1282 to 1481; art came later, to celebrate faded grandeur. Being maritime and cosmopolitan. Venice prized tolerance: The city was, in Wordsworth's phrase, "the eldest child of liberty." McNeill does well to stress the importance of this economically, for it fostered openness to such new techniques es glassmaking, which in turn nade possible Galileo's telescope.

But very curious is the rigid refusal to tolerate so much as a whiff of criticism of the city's constitution—a blood aristocracy virtually frozen in the form it attained early in the 14th century. Whereas the Florentines were continually devising new constitutional experiments, the Venetians remained political conservatives-rather like the English. Indeed it seems to be a principle among maritime nations not to rock the political

Colt's Withdrawal Settles Jockey Dispute

LONDON, May 29 (UPI).—Owner Nelson Bunker Hunt today withdrew his U.S.-brcd colt Mississipian from next Wednesday's £85,000 ($204,000) Epsom Derby.

In a telephone call from Dallas, Hunt was reported to have told trainer Maurice Zilber that Mississipian was not a good traveler and he also said he thought the horse was unsuited for the Epsom course.

Instead, Mississipian will run in the Prix du Jockey-Club-the French Derby-four days later with stable jockey Bill Pyers riding. The decision to withdraw Mississipian has

Judger Is Beaten In Jersey Derby

CHERRY HILL N.J., May 39 NYT .- The 3-year-old scene in thoroughbred racing received another surprise this week when Better Aroitor won the $160,000 Jersey Derby.

Better Arbitor paid $31.20 for those in the closing-day crowd at Garden State Park who had outher the nerve or the intuition to put $2 on Better Arbitor's chestnut nose. On recent form, you couldn't bet him. But form has taken a beating this season in the 3-year-old division, where each big stakes race seems to turn up a different winner.

Better Arbitor, largely an alsoran since last December, woke up vesterday with a front-running strategy designed to exploit what turned out to be a critical lack of early speed in the field of 19. Ridden by Carlos Barrera, the meet's leading jockey, the 14-1 shot opened an enormous lead on the final bend and held off a closing challenge by Stonewalk. "That's just a figure of speech." I said. "Everyone knows we're not talking about the White House—we're talking about the people in it."

"It's easy for you to say that. But, if you were sitting where I'm sitting you wouldn't think it was funny. I haven't done anything. I'm clean as a hound's tooth, and everyone lays everything on me. Houses have feetings, too."

"This is ridiculous." I told the White House, "No one is blaming you for anything that went on there. As far as most people are concerned, you're a pillar of

Record Coin Sale

NEW YORK, May 29 (AP).-A record $200,000 has been paid for a single coin sold at auction here, auctioneer Benjamin Stack said yesterday. The coin was a 1907 ultra-high-relief U.S. double eagle, a $20 gold piece of which only 16 specimens were made. It is about the size of a silver dollar. Mr. Stack said the lest one to be offered at auction went for $3,200 in 1944. The previous record price for a single coin was $150,000 for an 1804 silver dollar, paid last fall by Reed Hawn, a Texas collector, Mr. Stack said.

WASHINGTON-I was valking Dan Rather say on television past the White House the that the White House planned to stonewall the House Judiciary Committee. I've never stonewalled anyone in my life.

> "Then John Chancellor said the White House decided to hang touch against special prosecutor Jaworski. Now can a house hang tough?"

"I see what you mean." "I've had a lot of people live in me. Some have been good and some have been bad, but it gays right in the lease I am not responsible for anything they do. All I'm supposed to do is provide shelter from the elements and keep up a good facade, Now everyone is throwing stones

"It does seem unfair that the media has played loose with you." I said. "But I'm certain it was just an oversight."

The voice was trembling. can understand it when they talk about the Pentagon. That's a bad building. When they say the Pentagon asked for $100 billion, naturally people are going to get sore. Or when the Pentagen admits to an overrun on a nuclear aircrast carrier. But Twe never done anything like that. All I've over done is hold receptions, entertain tourists and pole for pictures. Why don't the media ever write about that?"

"I guess it's your location." I aid. "You're an easy target for every reporter in this town."

"Well, I'm staying here," the voice said. "Even if what's-hisname gets impeached. Good gravy, just the other day I saw a headline in a newspaper which said White House announces new rise in cost of living.' I did no such thing. Why would I be stupid enough to announce some-thing like that?"

"Look, I'm busy." I said. What do you want from me?" "I thought you could use a dumn." he said, chortling, celumn." "Take any one on the front porch

"Very funny," I said, "But I've been sucked in by the White House one too many times."

"There," the voice cried, "Even you're doing it."
"I'm sorry." I said, "but don't forget one thing. When you be-

Making Jokes in Self-Defense and for Money

By Boyce Rensberger

NEW YORK (NYT). - After extensive interviews and testing of 55 nationally known American comics-including all of the biggest names in the business—a New York clinical psychologist who, while a student, worked as a song-anddance man on the Catskills borschi circuit, has concluded what has long been felt; that the vast majority of funny men are sad men. When offstage, most comedians, he has found, are severely depressed, anxious and fearful. Making jokes is their way of defending themselves against what they see as a hostile and inhumane world. And the laughter and love of the audience is what keeps them going.

"There are numerous indications," said Dr. Samuel Janus. "that many of our top comedians, if one listens to their routines, are really crying out loud." Among the comments Dr. Janus has gathered is that of Abe Burrows, who said, "The comedian must practice his comedy in order to avoid destroying himself." Jack Carter. known as one of the most sarcastic of comedians, savs, The funny part, the laughter, is given to the audience, but the comedian is left with the bitter

Dr. Janus, a clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at New York Medical College, said his findings show that comedians. as a whole have come from lower-class backgrounds and struggled against a world that they felt never understood them.

Abe Burrows ... "must practice."

All were above average in intelligence, with the average IQ being 138. Many experienced severe psychological traums in childhood.

For example, Tommie Smothers's father died when he was 10 years old, and young Tommie had to look after his ailing mother and younger brother

"Life always seemed to the comics to present situations in which they were misunderstood. and picked on, or belittled." Dr. Janus said. In many cases, they make jokes about things against which they feel powerless. Dr. Janus said that although the remarks may be clever and humorous, they often actually Voice a deeply felt rage.

Most comedians find it possible to cope with the world only by converting their rage into verbal assault and receiving approval from an audience for doing so, the study showed. "They need that relationship with the audience," Dr. Janus said. "If somebody heckles or walks out, they may joke about it, but down deep inside they're crushed. Somebody didn't love them.'

Dr. Janus said that one of the comedian's most frequently voiced fears was that someday people would no longer laugh at his jokes. "No matter how famous any of our subjects were." Dr. Janus said, "and no matter how long in the limelight, there was a terror, as one put it, that today I'm on top, out tomorrow I may be a bum." All of the 55 comedians Dr.

Janus studied were earning in-comes of six to seven figures and had been in the business for an average of 25 years. There were 51 men and four women. Although the average age was 46, the range included many of the older comedians who started in vaudeville and radio.

Dr. Janus said a large proportion of the comics he studied were Jewish, and he repeatedly asked his subjects whether their religion had anything to do with their going into comedy. "At first they all denied it," Dr. Janus said. "But then they admitted it did. They said things like: 'Jews have always suffered. Jews had to learn to express their anger through words, through the mind."

"While a lot of these people have deep problems, they're not really sickies." Dr. Janus said. They're really very sweet, sensitive guys. Most of them are very stable people, good family men. The divorce rate is lower than that in show business as a
